SUBJECT: JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER III

SAC Boardman advised me on November 25 that he had seen John D. Rockefeller III, who was very cordial. Rockefeller pointed out that about ten years ago the Director furnished him information on what to do in case of a kidnapping. Rockefeller asked if he could send it to Boardman to see if the telephone numbers, etc., would be up to date. Boardman stated he would be glad to check it for him.

Rockefeller further brought up the question on the desirability of giving the children some instructions in defensive tactics. Boardman told him he had a former Agent working in his organization who might be able to handle this or put him in contact with someone who could give the instructions, namely, Edwin G. Fitch, a former supervisor here at the Seat of Government who now works for one of the Rockefeller corporations.

June 18, 1959

At 10:00AM today, the Director is scheduled to see MR. JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, III.

Inspector Suttler, Crime Records Division, will be standing by in the Director's Telephone Room to conduct Mr. Rockefeller on a tour of the Bureau after his meeting with the Director, if he desires.

Background material is attached. Background memorandum on Mr. Rockefeller previously submitted to the Director. It is noted that Mr. Rockefeller has indicated that he wishes to discuss the future of the Rockefeller Public Service Awards.

4:38PM June 11, 1959

Miss Irvine, secretary to Mr. JOHN D. Rockefeller telephoned from New York City to advise that Mr. Rockefeller will be in Washington on Thursday, June 18, 1959, and would like very much to see the Director sometime during the morning of June 18, if possible.

Miss Irvine was told the Director was presently out of the office and that as soon as we are in touch with the Director we would advise him of her call and we would be in touch with her.

Miss Irvine indicated that calling her anytime tomorrow after 10:00AM would be fine; she can be reached in New York City at Circle 7-7300.

Background memorandum has been requested.
Dear Mr. Hoover:

Just a note to say that the matter that I am anxious to talk with you about is the future of the Rockefeller Public Service Awards. As you may know, the original objective has been substantially accomplished with the enactment of the bill which provides Government funds for the training of key federal civilian employees.

I look forward to seeing you in your office at 10:00 a.m. on Thursday morning, June 18th.

Sincerely,

Mr. J. Edgar Hoover
Director
Federal Bureau of Investigation
Department of Justice Building
Washington, D.C.
SYNOPSIS:

Director has agreed to meet with John D. Rockefeller III at 10:00 A.M., June 18, 1959. In a letter (being held in Director's Office) Rockefeller indicated he desired to discuss with the Director the future of the Rockefeller Public Service Awards indicating that the prime objective of the awards had been substantially fulfilled by the recently enacted bill providing training for key Federal civilian employees (Government Employees Training Act, Public Law 85-507, enacted 7-7-58).

Rockefeller was born 3-21-06 in New York City, is married, has homes in New York City and Tarrytown, New York, has been acquainted with the Director since 1938 and since then there has been limited but cordial correspondence. Has been an SAC contact since January, 1955. In 1956 he formed the Asia Society to foster understanding between the U. S. and the Far East. A number of individuals on the Society's board of trustees were members of the Institute of Pacific Relations and allegedly had Communist Party affiliations. The Director noted concerning this, "It certainly has some questionable characters in it. It shows how a 'joiner' like Rockefeller can be used. H." There is no information concerning Rockefeller's association with the questionable members.

Rockefeller Public Service Awards were established in 1952. The program is administered by the Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs, Princeton University; is designed to give special recognition to outstanding public servants and to establish incentives for them. Program provides grants for study from six to twelve months at no financial sacrifice by the recipients at institutions of their own choice. The program is open to Federal career employees with outstanding backgrounds who evidence a sincere interest in public service as a career. No limitations as to sex, creed, color or national origin. Candidates must have at least five years of Federal service and normally range between 35 and 50 years of age. The Bureau has followed policy of abstaining from participating in program because of derogatory information pertaining to some members of the Committee on Selection which recommends candidates. (See page 5 of details.)

REC. 18 96-45 98 - 12
1 - Mr. Holloman 1 - Mr. DeLoach 1 - Mr. Mohr 1 - Tour Room 1 - Mr. M. A. Jones
The Government Employees Training Act, P. L. 85-507, enacted 7-7-58 includes an expressed policy of Congress to provide Government sponsored training programs. These are to be administered by agencies under regulations established by the Civil Service Commission. Training is authorized utilizing both Government and non-Government facilities.

The purpose of this act is substantially what the Rockefeller Public Service Awards were established to provide and thus Rockefeller is undoubtedly correct in stating that the prime objective has been substantially fulfilled by this act. Rockefeller's problem therefore would be to determine whether there would be any remaining area into which his award program could be redirected.

For the Director's Information, there is also pending in Congress the Career Service Act of 1959, Senate Bill 1638, introduced by Senator Clark of Pennsylvania 4-10-59. This has similar over-all objectives to the Rockefeller Public Service Awards program. The bill is designed to reorganize the structure of the civil service administration setup in the Federal Government. The FBI, as well as CIA, AE etc., is exempted. The Bureau is following this bill to assure the continuation of this exemption. This proposed legislation establishes a Career Service covering all appointive civil offices and positions in the executive branch of the Government with the exceptions noted above. Rules to be promulgated by the President cover training and career development of employees. Additionally, the Director of the Office of Personnel Management shall "provide for the broadening of career opportunities by facilitating transfers within and between agencies and by training and career development programs." Also, he shall "assist each agency to establish a promotion, training and career development plan based upon its particular needs." The specific details of the training program under the Career Service Act are not spelled out.

In view of the fact that the Bureau has abstained from participation in the Rockefeller Public Service Awards program, it is felt the Director would not want to comment on the merits of Rockefeller's existing program. The Director can certainly agree with Rockefeller that congressional legislation has substantially displaced and fulfilled the need for the program as now constituted. There does not appear to be any crying need for supplemental aid in the field of educating Federal career employees in which area this award program could be redirected. If the Director were to encourage the redirection of this program, Rockefeller might expect the Bureau to actively participate which would seem to be undesirable for reasons set out above.

RECOMMENDATIONS:

1. That this memorandum be referred to the Director for his information in talking with Rockefeller.

2. That Rockefeller be invited on a special tour of the Bureau to be conducted by a Special Agent if his time schedule permits. See details which follow.
Jones to DeLoach memorandum

DETAILS

BACKGROUND:

Mr. Rockefeller's secretary called the Director's Office on June 11 stating that Rockefeller would be in Washington on Thursday, June 18, and would like very much to see the Director some time that morning if possible. In response to this request, the Director noted, "Make it for 10:00 a.m., June 18. H." This time has been confirmed with Mr. Rockefeller's office.

It has been determined that Rockefeller desires to discuss with the Director the future of the Rockefeller Public Service Awards and the recent bill enacted concerning the training of key Federal civilian employees. Following is data re Rockefeller, the Awards, the Government Employees Training Act and the pending Career Service Act of 1959.

BIOGRAPHICAL DATA RE ROCKEFELLER:

John Davison Rockefeller III was born on March 21, 1906, in New York City, the son of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and the brother of Nelson A. Rockefeller, the Governor of New York, Winthrop Rockefeller, Laurance S. Rockefeller and David Rockefeller. He was graduated from Princeton University in 1929. He is a Director of Rockefeller Center, Inc., and a member of the Century, Downtown, University and other Clubs. He is married and resides in New York City and also has a home in Tarrytown, New York.

INFORMATION IN BUFILS: RE ROCKEFELLER:

This memorandum has been limited to main files and pertinent references relating to John D. Rockefeller III.
Jones to DeLoach memorandum

John D. Rockefeller III has been acquainted with the Director since 1938 when Rockefeller wrote Mr. Hoover stating that he enjoyed the discussion on juvenile delinquency at Mr. Chorley's apartment and thought the Director would like to see a book entitled "Youth in the Toils," which he enclosed. The Director acknowledged this letter on February 19, 1938. (94-4-1663)

The Director congratulated Rockefeller on 6-15-39 on his appointment as Chairman of the Committee for the Study of the Prevention of Crimes by Youth which Rockefeller acknowledged his appreciation by letter of June 20, 1939. In 1940, the Director sent Rockefeller some suggestions on how to protect his new home and a plan of procedure in the event a kidnaping or threatened kidnaping to one of his family occurred. Correspondence with Rockefeller since 1940 has been very limited but cordial. (94-45303)

In 1956, Rockefeller formed the Asia Society to foster understanding between the United States and the Far East. This Society's Board of Trustees contained a number of individuals who were members of the Institute of Pacific Relations and who allegedly had Communist Party affiliations. In connection with Rockefeller's presidency of this organization the Director noted, "It certainly has some questionable characters in it. It shows how a 'joiner' like Rockefeller can be used." Buffalos contain no indication that Rockefeller was other than a figurehead officer in the Society and we have no information concerning his association with the questionable members. (105-55843)

There is no indication that Rockefeller has toured our headquarters facilities and if his schedule permits, it is believed he would appreciate the courtesy of a tour.

ROCKEFELLER PUBLIC SERVICE AWARDS:

These Awards were established in 1952 at Princeton University under a grant from John D. Rockefeller III and are designed to give special recognition to outstanding public service by civilians in the executive branch of the Government and to establish incentives for the continuance and advancement of those in the service. The Awards are sufficient to enable each recipient at no financial sacrifice to himself to spend no less than six nor more than twelve months in residence at an institution of the individual's choice or in some comparable educational activity.
Jones to DeLoach memorandum

The program is open to Federal career employees whose performance has been distinguished by intellectual maturity, leadership, character and competence and who evidence a sincere interest in public service as a career. There are no limitations as to sex, creed, color or national origin. The candidates need not be graduates of a college or university. They must have at least five years Federal service and normally must be between the ages of 35 and 50. The essential criterion is evidence of demonstrated value of the employee to the Government service and evidence of future value in terms of general prominence or usefulness or in terms of a specific future assignment. The candidates can either be nominated by Government agencies or by direct application.

The program is administered by the Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs, Princeton University. The Bureau has never participated in this program due to certain derogatory information pertaining to members of the Committee on Selection which recommends candidates to the University trustees.

Members of the committee in 1958 included Anna Lord Strauss and Edward S. Mason. Edward S. Mason is the Dean of the Harvard Graduate School of Public Administration.

GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES TRAINING ACT, P.L. 85-507:

On 7-7-58 the Government Employees Training Act was enacted which stated the following to be the expressed policy of Congress. "It is necessary and desirable in the public interest that self-education, self-improvement, and self-training by such employees be supplemented and extended by Government-sponsored programs, provided for by this Act, for the training of such employees in the performance of official duties and for the development of skills, knowledge, and abilities which will best qualify them for performance of official duties." The training programs are to be administered by Government agencies under regulations established by the Civil Service Commission. An important phase of the Act is the authorization of programs of training through both Government and non-Government facilities.
Jones to DeLoach memorandum

CAREER SERVICE ACT OF 1959, S. 1638 (86th CONGRESS):

A bill recently introduced which has much the same over-all objectives as does the Rockefeller Service Awards program is the Career Service Act of 1959. It was introduced on April 10, 1959, by Mr. Clark of Pennsylvania (D) to provide for a more effective system of personnel administration for the executive branch of the Government. The bill is designed to reorganize the structure of the civil service administration setup in the Federal Government. FBI is exempt from the provisions of this bill with other agencies, such as CIA, AEC, etc. The bill was referred to the Senate Committee on Post Office and Civil Service. A similar bill, S. 3888, was introduced by Mr. Clark during the 85th Congress and received no action. The Bureau is following this bill to assure that the exemption of the FBI is continued.

The proposed legislation establishes a Career Service which shall include all appointive civil offices and positions in the executive branch of the Government with exceptions noted above. It provides that the President shall issue rules for the administration of the Career Service covering such matters as recruitment, appointment, promotion, transfer, assignment and separation of employees. It places broad authority in the proposed Office of the Director of Personnel Management, responsible to the President, to develop a reserve of qualified personnel, to conduct salary surveys and to assist agencies in training and career development.

The specific language of the Act provides that the President shall promulgate rules for the administration of the Career Service which shall include regulations to "(5) provide for the training and career development of employees." Additionally, the Director of the Office of Personnel Management shall "provide for the broadening of career opportunities by facilitating transfers within and between agencies and by training and career development programs." Also, he shall "assist each agency to establish a promotion, training and career development plan based upon its particular needs."

The bill also provides for the continuation of the Civil Service Commission (CSC) consisting of three members appointed by the President by and with the advice and consent of the Senate for a term of six years. The functions of the CSC would be to hear appeals, including political and other discriminating appeals, classification appeals, veterans' appeals and others. The decision of the CSC on appeals shall be final and shall be binding on, and complied with by, each other agency of the Government.
Jones to DeLoach memorandum

OBSERVATIONS:

It will be noted that the specific details of the training program under the Career Service Act are not spelled out, and the Civil Service Commission has responsibility for establishing regulations under the Government Employees Training Act. In view of the non-participation by the Bureau in the Awards program, it is felt it would be best not to involve the Bureau in any discussion of this topic.
MEMORANDUM FOR MR. TOLSON

On June 18, 1959, I saw Mr. John D. Rockefeller, III, who was accompanied by Mr. Donald McClain (phonetic). Mr. Rockefeller stated that he assumed I was somewhat familiar with the Rockefeller Public Service Awards. I told him I was.

He indicated that now that Congress has passed legislation which will take care of the same field covered by these Public Service Awards, he wanted to explore with me the possibility as to whether the fund which had been set up making possible these awards could be used for some other useful public purpose. Mr. Rockefeller stated that there had been numerous suggestions made, such as giving some awards to members of the staff of Congressional investigating committees, et cetera.

I told Mr. Rockefeller that the only project I knew of directly which might be one that could be considered was the financing in some way attendance at the National Academy of the FBI. I described to Mr. Rockefeller the scope of the Academy's work, what it has accomplished, and the difficulties some police officers have in attending the Academy because of the fact that their communities do not have financial resources to pay their salaries and expenses while they are in attendance at the Academy.

Mr. Rockefeller seemed to be quite interested in this program but did not in any way commit himself.

Very truly yours,

John Edgar Hoover

Dear Mr. Hoover,

In view of what you said in connection with one or two of the questions which we discussed when we had dinner together at Mr. Chorley's apartment several weeks ago it occurred to me that you might be interested in seeing a copy of the book "YOUTH IN TAI TOILS" written by Messrs. Harrison and Grant under the auspices of the Delinquency Committee of the Boys Bureau. I enclose a copy herewith.

The book deals with the delinquency question, the authors first presenting the problem as it exists here in New York and then making certain suggestions which would seem to offer a possible solution. Should you have an opportunity to read the book I can assure you that any comments which you might care to make would be much appreciated by Mr. Harrison and the Delinquency Committee.

Very sincerely,

/s/ John D. Rockefeller 3rd

RECORDED & INDEXED

Honorable John D. Rockefeller, 3rd,
Room 5600, 30 Rockefeller Plaza,
Rockefeller Center,
New York, New York.

Dear Mr. Rockefeller:

Receipt is acknowledged of your letter of February 14, 1938, together with the book "Youth in the Toils" which is written by Messrs. Harrison and Grant. I appreciate your thoughtfulness in sending it to me and am anxious to find the first opportunity to finish reading it.

I have gone through the first several pages, and the thoughts expressed are pertinent to our recent conversation. After I have finished it I plan to drop Mr. Harrison a note about the work he has done.

With best wishes and kind regards,

Sincerely yours,

J. Edgar Hoover
The Officers and Directors of the United Negro College Fund believe you will find of special interest this address by John D. Rockefeller 3rd at Spelman College. It offers a constructive approach to the problem of equal opportunity—a matter of vital concern to all of us.

Spelman College in Atlanta, Georgia, is one of thirty-two independent accredited Negro colleges and universities holding membership in the United Negro College Fund. Enclosure attached.

PROGRESS BEYOND PROTEST

I am very happy to visit Spelman College again. My family has been associated for five generations with the College as well as with the ideals of education that it serves. We are proud of the relationship and we applaud the leadership of President Reid and President Manley in establishing Spelman as one of the fine institutions of education in Atlanta and in the entire South.

Spelman always had a special meaning for my grandfather, who spoke here at the ceremonies naming it just eighty years ago yesterday. The College, as you know, is named for my great-grandparents, whose home was a station on the underground railroad.

It is gratifying to me that I should have the opportunity to represent my family here today, and to join with you in dedicating this Fine Arts Building to the memory of my father. His interest in Spelman as well as the United Negro College Fund is well known. But especially in our minds today was his interest in the arts to which this building is dedicated. It is most fitting that it bear his name, for art and beauty were meaningful factors in his life and he attached great importance to the place of the arts in the lives of people generally.
My hope — and I know it would be my father’s hope — is that you will use this building as another means of gaining the fuller, richer life which the arts make available to us. I trust that each of you — and the future students of Spelman — will carry the knowledge and appreciation of art and culture gained here back to your families and communities.

I have wondered whether my talk today should be on the importance of the fine arts to your life and mine. But instead I have chosen a subject that is, I believe, even more important — the challenge of new opportunities for you and many other young people in schools and colleges across the country.

During the past two or three years, an exciting and significant social change has transformed the possibilities for the minorities of America. We are at the point of a changing tide where it is crucial that we understand these new opportunities and the responsibilities that go with them. Unless we see this new situation clearly, and act upon it with vigor, we may become lost in an undertow of violence and grief.

How America treats its minorities — and especially its Negro population — is first of all a moral question. Yet we should not ignore the far-reaching economic effects of the current struggle for equal opportunity. We should also be aware that what helps the Negro helps other minorities in all parts of America: the immigrant in New York, the migrant in the Southwest, the miner in Appalachia. And on the world scene, only a totally free America, meeting the ideals, rights, and aspirations of all, regardless of race, can maintain ideological leadership. As President Johnson stated last year: “Unless we are willing to yield up our destiny of greatness among the civilizations of history, Americans — white and Negro together — must be about the business of resolving the challenge which confronts us now.”

Against this background, I would first like to discuss with you the three interrelated factors that, as I see it, dominate the civil rights question today. Simply expressed, they are barriers, jobs, and education.

II

As to barriers, it is clear that more and more are falling — in housing, employment, government, and education — in virtually every area of our national life. There is broad and growing understanding that, as President Kennedy put it, race has no place in American life or law.

I realize that to many of us the progress seems limited and slow — only the first steps on a long journey. In any event, it is a long-awaited beginning — a beginning that makes inevitable the day when every American will enjoy an equal freedom.

As Roy Wilkins has said, we are seeing “an awakening of the American conscience to the urgency of the civil rights issue.” The barriers that remain, stand not only in the South, they stand in the North as well; the problem is not a sectional one, but a national one. It is no longer the Negro’s problem; it is the problem of every American.
The Negro protest, militant and determined, is not just a struggle against a wrong. Rather, it is a struggle for a right. Its roots are in the spirit — and the letter — of our democratic heritage. It seeks not an empty symbol nor a mere emblem of status. It seeks instead what is real and basic to the Negro and to every American: his personal dignity, his education, his job, his home.

The all-important Civil Rights Bill is now being considered in our Senate. The attention of the nation is focused upon the debate. While we look forward to its early passage, we must remember that the removal of legal barriers is only a first step. The laws are still to be enforced. Then, while they are being enforced and even after, still other barriers stand — these more difficult to break down. These are the hidden barriers. No law, no enforcement, no protest can erase these, for they exist hidden in the minds and hearts of people, of Negroes and whites alike. These are the intensely personal barriers of attitude, of how one man regards another, of how well or how little one man likes another. Subtle, ingrained, tangled, the sum of all our experiences, these hidden barriers cannot be removed; they can only be overcome.

They shall be overcome as whites and Negroes come more and more into contact with one another in their workaday lives, as a person of a color or a background different from ours becomes our neighbor and our co-worker. Misunderstandings will be myriad because of the wide gulf caused by centuries of enforced separation and by indifference will take time to bridge. There will be setbacks, but there will be victories as well, each lowering a hidden barrier, each bringing nearer the day of equal freedom for all.

III

The second factor I would discuss is jobs. Here a dramatic and encouraging development has occurred across the American scene. Jobs for qualified Negroes are opening at a rate that those close to the situation would not have believed possible just a year ago.

Today, if a young man or woman has ability and initiative and is willing to give himself wholeheartedly to his work, he will find in many companies that there is no position from which he will be barred because of race. Also, in these companies he has opportunity to rise to the higher positions, provided he has the abilities to meet the intensive competition. Such a statement would have been unthinkable only months ago.

Lately, I have discussed job opportunities with the heads of several national corporations. I am greatly impressed and gratified by their approach to this rapidly moving situation. They cited the strides their companies are making in hiring Negroes and moving them along into ever higher positions of responsibility and proficiency. This is not a record of isolated instances, but solid, hopeful evidence of the infusion of the Negro into the mainstream of American business.
ness. Yet there is an irony that must temper optimism: the jobs are opening faster than Negroes can be found or prepared to fill them. Automation is crowding out the unskilled, calling for higher and higher levels of training and education.

At the same time, forces within industry and government are at work to help disadvantaged minorities take advantage of the opportunities now coming within their reach. Some 150 leading companies are enrolled in the Plans for Progress under the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity, in an imaginative and increasingly successful program to provide training and to open jobs for Negroes. The National Skills Bank, started last year by the Urban League, is helping to match individuals to jobs. In New York, an organization known as Harlem Youth Opportunities is developing a special attack on the problems there, and similar programs are beginning in other cities.

Yet a man must be responsible for his own qualifications. The help of others is often important—especially now—but, in the last analysis, if a man is to measure up, he must stand on his own two feet. Austin Walden, Atlanta's new judge, put it this way: "I have little concern about the difficulty of breaking down the remaining barriers in the pathway of Negro youth, but I am greatly concerned that youth prepare to take full advantage of the opportunities now opening before them... Henceforth, the young Negro will increasingly have to compete with the youth of the world. It will no longer suffice to be the best Negro. He will have to be the best man, period."

IV

So we have barriers going down and jobs opening up. The young American Negro faces unprecedented opportunities and, at the same time, the unprecedented challenge to prepare himself for them. Thus, we have the third factor in the civil rights struggle: education.

In the American dream, education has always been the watchword, the talisman, the open sesame to opportunity. Education is what our founding fathers so revered, what Lincoln gained by firelight, what, throughout our history, the sacrifices of one generation have earned for the next. As the leaders of the civil rights movement recognize, education is the key to the future of the American Negro as it is for all of us.

Yet, many have told me, education is the word that the young Negro of 1964 does not want to hear. He is impatient, they say. Talk of education he equates with further delay. Education to him means back to the books, wait a while—and he does not want to wait.

Every man of conscience will be sympathetic with this impatience. Yet can we speak of the opportunities which are opening and ignore what must be done to bring them within reach? Ralph McGill made this observation: "Because of the long isolation of the Negro from American life, a cultural and educational lag exists which would make it difficult for many Negroes—especially those in the rural South and those who had gone from it, untaught and unskilled to the industrial cities of the East and West—to take advantage of the rights attained."

James B. Conant has noted this cultural isolation in communities all over America. Children from these areas, he points out, are disadvantaged by isolation before their education begins; they are behind from the start, and the lag only lengthens as the pupil advances. The consequences are all too familiar. They appear especially in the adolescent years as increasing thousands of discouraged Negroes drop out of high school—young veterans socially crippled from the wounds of poverty and discrimination, caught tragically in the vicious circle of lack of training, lack of job, lack of hope.

That this lag be recognized and eliminated is of central importance to the Negro, to all the minorities of America, and to America itself. Every day this lag is allowed to exist our nation is wasting valuable human resources. Its correction is a matter not only of conscience but of common sense.

It must be a foremost task of our time to equip American education with a catch-up capacity that will permit our disadvantaged minorities an equal chance with all Americans to meet their basic needs and to realize their full potential. If this effort is to be really effective we must, as Dr. Conant has suggested, begin at the beginning. We must concentrate a massive effort on the beginning grades including kindergarten.

For leadership in this catch-up effort we look to our educators, to the teachers and administrators, and to the citizens on our school boards. With each, we must rely on his skill, but we must depend, to at least an equal degree, upon his heart, upon how much he truly cares about the welfare of the children.

The importance of “caring” cannot be overemphasized. I will always remember what a friend told me about a visit he made to several South American countries during the thirties. In many humble homes, alongside a revered religious symbol, he often saw a picture of Franklin D. Roosevelt. My friend one day asked a farmer why he gave the picture such a place of honor. The farmer said, “Because President Roosevelt is our friend. Because he cares about us and our problems.”

Even as we begin this massive catch-up effort within our schools, the urgency of the situation requires other, more immediate steps. I have in mind a proliferation of locally based projects designed to seek out promising disadvantaged boys and girls to give them the extra help they need to be admitted to high schools and colleges. There is a widening awareness of the extent of the problem and the urgency of the steps needed for its solution. Many encouraging beginnings are already under way. For example, universities and colleges such as Dartmouth, Princeton, and Oberlin are involved in such programs, as are Hotchkiss and Loomis Schools on the preparatory level. Still another promising technique to enrich our educational system is the increasing exchange between Negro and non-Negro colleges, the so-called sister-to-sister program, where, for instance, Tuskegee and Michigan are exchanging professors and students in many departments.

More, much more, needs to be done. We must look beyond our school systems if progress is to be rapid enough. Industry, labor, government, foundations, and individual citizens all have a role to play. It is essential that new and increased efforts, by both public and private agencies, be forthcoming. The objective is clear: to equip American society with the capacity to bring the new opportunities within reach of the disadvantaged.

From this brief review of the current situation in relation to barriers, jobs, and education, it seems clear that important progress is being made—progress in the steady lowering of legal barriers, in the significant increase in job opportunities, in the growing attention to educational needs and training programs.

To me the winds of change coursing across our land carry a message of hope for the young Negro, for all Americans. This progress I see is not founded on a passive wish, but upon the realities of our day, upon the surging evidence of a turning tide.

The thought I would leave with you today is that the tide of progress which brings us hope also brings us responsibility. I cannot emphasize too strongly this element of responsibility. Certainly it is a collective responsibility facing our communities, our states, and our national government, but even more important, it is an individual responsibility facing each and every one of us.

As individual citizens in a democracy, our responsibility is direct and personal. In our way of life, change comes not on order from the top, but by the accumulated actions of citizens working as individuals or groups across the nation. These may be the separate actions of a town council, a church board, the president of a company, the mayor of a city, or the governors of a club. They may be the actions of a personnel officer, a union delegate, a restaurant owner, a landlord, or the driver of a bus.

When the citizens of a nation are alert and progressive, a country moves ahead; when they are not, it moves backward; it cannot stand still. It is easy for citizens in a democracy to brush aside their responsibility on the grounds that the problems are too great or complex, the end results beyond their competence. We must remember, however, that it is what we do as parents, as voters, as workers in civic or social organizations, as holders of public office that will, in the last analysis, give equal opportunity to all Ameri-
of us, as I have tried to indicate, an important role to play. And for you young people the responsibility is special. Yours must now be the role of the statesman who succeeds the revolutionary, of the settler who comes after the pioneer. There is in history a time for each, and to each posterity owes an equal debt. This is your great challenge . . . this is your great opportunity.
The individual responsibility which we are discussing applies to you young people with special impact and meaning. It has twofold implications. First, there is the responsibility to equip yourself to take full advantage of the new opportunities opening to you.

By raising your sights and reorienting your thinking, you can look ahead to a future of exciting promise. You can look beyond the older, long-open professions such as teaching, important as they are. You can see the way clear to new careers in business, science, technology, and the arts, to mention but a few.

Competition will be stiff; you will be severely challenged to meet it. Many say the Negro has an “attitude deficiency”; he lacks competitive spirit, he lacks a sense of personal responsibility. The resort is that he has only lately been allowed to enter the competition, and has never had much to be responsible for. To the disadvantaged, discrimination is both a handicap and an alibi. However, it must be recognized that when the handicap goes, so does the alibi.

Your success in preparing for and meeting these new opportunities will inspire other young people in your community to similar effort to advance themselves. And I would say to you without reservation that you can also be an example, an inspiration to the youth of all America, both Negro and white. The extent of your own success will depend very considerably upon your motivation, upon your will to win. It will also depend upon recognition that we get out of life only what we put in; and what we put in is determined largely by how well we are prepared.

Second, there is your broader responsibility to your community and to the nation. You, and many other students like you, have been in the forefront of the Negro protest that is rewriting our laws and changing the economic and political patterns of American life. You have made protest a positive force. Now fast-changing circumstances summon you to progress beyond protest, to capitalize upon what protest has bought, to make safe and secure what is so newly won.

I do not suggest that there is no longer need for protest. I wish this were true, but laws are yet to be enforced, uncounted barriers are still to be removed. The civil rights movement undoubtedly will continue until we achieve the equal freedom that simple dignity demands. I trust, with a fervent faith, that this movement will always be distinguished by forbearance, by non-violence, and by a deserved respect for wise leadership. The individual actions of you young people and your adherence to responsible leadership will determine to a large extent the ultimate success of the movement and whether it will escape the tragedy of violence.

There is no question that the outcome of the civil rights struggle is crucial to the future of our country and hence to every American. In its successful resolution there is for each
By memorandum 6-24-60, Mr. John W. Adler, Chief, Personnel Office of the Department, has forwarded an announcement of the program for captioned awards for 1960. Deadline for the filing of nominations for awards is 8-15-60.

As reflected in Bureau files the Bureau has never participated in this program. These awards were established in 1951 at Princeton University under a grant given by John D. Rockefeller III. They are given annually to men and women in Federal Government who have rendered outstanding service to the nation. $3500 will be given to winners of an award and each will be privileged, but not required to make available to others some of the knowledge his years of service have given him. This may take the form of writing a book length manuscript, a series of articles or lectures or brief periods of residence at one or more universities. Candidates shall have been in the employ of the Federal Government for a minimum of 15 years, shall be at least 45 years of age and shall have a reasonable period of useful future service in prospect.

Due to certain derogatory information pertaining to certain members who have been on the Committee on Selection, which recommends nominees considered best qualified for an award, the Bureau has never participated in the program.

RECOMMENDATION:

That the Bureau continue its policy of not submitting any nominees for captioned award. No acknowledgement is necessary to the memorandum from Mr. Adler.

MEMORANDUM TO HEADS OF DIVISIONS, BUREAUS AND OFFICES, SEAT OF GOVERNMENT

Subject: Rockefeller Public Service Awards

There is attached copy of the formal announcement of the Rockefeller Public Service Awards program for 1960.

Two new features of the program are brought to your attention. Persons may no longer apply on their own but must be nominated. Awards will be based on recognition of accomplishments rather than on self-improvement or training.

You will also note that the candidates are expected to be in the GS-16 to 18 classification brackets; shall have been in the employ of the Federal Government for a minimum of 15 years; must be at least 45 years of age; and have a reasonable period of useful service in prospect.

Nominations may be submitted by an employee or former employee or, under certain circumstances by a person not connected with the Government. Endorsement of the employing agency is not required except that the Committee on Selection will solicit the agency's views as a part of its screening process.

Nominations should be submitted prior to August 15, 1960 to this office for transmission to Princeton.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, III

In 1956 captioned individual formed the Asia Society to foster understanding between the United States and the Far East. This Society's Board of Trustees contained a number of individuals who were members of the Institute of Pacific Relations and who allegedly had Communist Party affiliations.

During 1943 Mr. Rockefeller was identified as one of the individuals contributing to the work of the Institute of Pacific Relations.

According to a report of the Senate Judiciary Committee, July 2, 1952, the Institute of Pacific Relations was a vehicle used by the communists to orientate American Far Eastern policies toward communist objectives. Members of the small core of officials and staff members who controlled the Institute of Pacific Relations were either communist or procommunist. The American Communist Party and Soviet officials considered the organization "an instrument of Communist policy, propaganda and military intelligence."

The fingerprint files of the Identification Division of the FBI contain no arrest data identifiable with captioned individual based on the background information submitted in connection with this name check request.
